

Benefits of Work Integrated Learning (WIL)

With the WIL way of learning, three key stakeholders are involved; students, employers and academic institutions. This is a win-win situation for everyone involved and everyone enjoys several benefits.

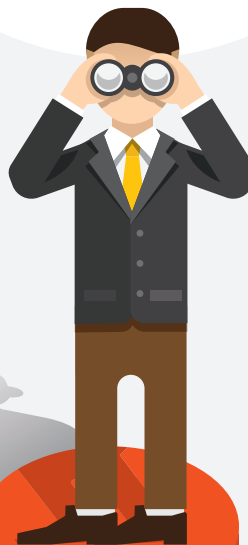

Students Get

- Practical Experience
- Applied Learning
- Skill/professional development
- Personal Growth
- Networking
- An edge in the job market
- Future career success
- Career exploration
- Enhanced transition into the workplace
- Self-awareness

Employers Get

- Access to high-quality students
- Students bring new ideas and innovation to work projects
- Development of employer's coaching and leadership skills
- Reinforce previous education and training
- Access to current theoretical knowledge and resources
- Development and maintenance of a positive reputation
- Opportunities for evaluation
- Improved employee morale
- Opportunities for recruitment of strong "work-ready" graduates

Academic Institutions Get

- Increased community engagement
- Increased communication with government and industry
- Opportunities for curriculum enhancement with applied content
- Enhanced student recruitment

